Q: How to multiply two or more numbers with a certain leading 0 in python I'm trying to multiply two numbers with a certain leading zeros in python but I can't make it to work, here is my current code: number1 = 104802 #104802*3000 = 306017000 number2 = 3000 #3000*1 = 3000 number3 = 2 #2*1 = 2 print str(number1) + "" + str(number2) + "" + str(number3) Unfortunately, I just get the current output of: print str(number1) + "" + str(number2) + "" + str(number3) It will only print out: 300017000 I'm thinking that it is something to do with the leading zeros, but how to solve it? A: You are probably looking for string formatting: '{} * {} * {}'.format(number1, number2, number3) This will give you 306017000 * 3000 * 2 If you want to fill this in with some values for numbers: number1 = 104802 number2 = 3000 number3 = 2 result = '{0} * {1} * {2}'.format(number1, number2, number3) print result Note that this will give you the correct result, but it's not clear what you're trying to accomplish, as the number 3 * 1 * 1 is actually the same as the number 1 * 1 * 1. Extravasation-associated pulmonary injury: a rare occurrence. Extravasation is a rare but potentially fatal complication of intravenous infusions. It is characterized by a sudden leakage of blood and serum outside the intravenous catheter, with subsequent penetration of the alveoli causing pulmonary injury. The incidence has been reported to be around 2.7 per 100,000 inpatients. Here we report a case of extravasation in a woman with a past medical history of a brain tumour. The patient presented to our emergency department with a sudden onset dyspnoea. Radiography of the chest showed bilateral diffuse haemorrhage in the lungs, which was confirmed by CT scan. Blood cultures were positive for

In my entire life, I've never once experienced a man being so goddamned stubborn as to not change his mind in the face of logic. As men, we are by nature argumentative, and we are bombarded with information from every angle on a daily basis from the news, blogs, books and even our friends. But as stubborn men, we get stubbornly caught in the rigidity of our own ways of thinking and acting and if we're pushed beyond our breaking point, we just go rigid like a plank. Men that are married or in a committed relationship with a woman are most likely to experience this type of one-sidedness with regards to their wives or girlfriends. Their partners are expected to see the world according to their eyes, tastes, and desires, but when these men fall into the trap of letting their partners sway their opinions, they're all too quick to fight back and it makes for a very volatile dynamic indeed. And yet, it's when things go bad that they do, and the astute man knows to pull himself out of the clamshell and get to work immediately. The man who has been blinded by the woman he loves and the woman who has been blinded by the man she loves is in danger of letting a destructive dynamic unfold into something that could be devastating to everyone involved. Don't let this happen. No matter what it costs you, decide now to try something new and try to see things from your partner's point of view. If he doesn't see things your way, then ask him why and try and figure out whether or not you agree. The truth is that sometimes it isn't the right decision to end a relationship with your partner, but it's also not the wrong one to make. Yes, it could be the beginning of the end, but it might just be the opening to a happier life. Try to be open to the good, the bad and the ugly. You may find that the woman who you once loved has grown into a woman who you love a little more.package com.savinrails.checklist.domain class CheckListDetailEntity(val detail:String) class CheckListEntity(val listId:Int, val title:String, val detail:String, val user: String) class CheckListDeletedEntity(val listId: Int) data class
